Neave Trio

Since forming in 2010, GRAMMY®-nominated Neave Trio—violinist Anna Williams, cellist Mikhail Veselov, and pianist Eri Nakamura—has earned enormous praise for its engaging, cutting-edge performances. WQXR explains, “‘Neave’ is actually a Gaelic name meaning ‘bright’ and ‘radiant’, both of which certainly apply to this trio’s music making.” The Boston Musical Intelligencer included Neave in its “Best of 2014” and “Best of 2016” roundups, claiming, “their unanimity, communication, variety of touch, and expressive sensibility rate first tier.” Neave has performed and held residencies at many esteemed concert series and at festivals worldwide.

Neave Trio strives to champion new works by living composers and reach wider audiences through innovative concert presentations, regularly collaborating with artists of all mediums. These collaborations include D-Cell: an Exhibition & Durational Performance, conceived and directed by multi-disciplinary visual artist David Michalek; as well as performances with the Blythe Barton Dance Company; with dance collective BodySonnet; with projection designer Ryan Brady; in Klee Musings by acclaimed American composer Augusta Read Thomas, which was premiered by Neave; in the premiere of Eric Nathan’s Missing Words V, sponsored by Coretet; and in a music video by filmmaker Amanda Alvarez Díaz of Astor Piazzolla’s “Otoño Porteño,” among many others.

Neave Trio’s critically acclaimed recordings include Musical Remembrances (Chandos Records, 2022), for which they received a GRAMMY® nomination; Her Voice (Chandos Records, 2019); Celebrating Piazzolla (Azica Records, 2018), which features mezzo-soprano Carla Jablonski; French Moments (Chandos Records, 2018); and its debut album, American Moments (Chandos Records, 2016).

Pigeonwing Dance

“to cut a pigeon wing”: Dictionary of American Regional English. To execute intricate dance steps gracefully...to dance in a fancy way

Described by The New Yorker as “eccentric...playful...curious,” Pigeonwing Dance seeks the coordinates where beauty turns to awkwardness and tension dissolves into ease. Whirlwinds, accidents, and chance encounters are caught, preserved, and folded into dance. This improvisatory abandon is counterbalanced by meticulous calculation, revealing intricate architectures where fleeting moments of resolution open into new wonderings.

Pigeonwing, named for its blend of airiness and NYC grit, was founded in 2016 by Guggenheim Fellow Gabrielle Lamb. PWD has been presented by New York City Center, the CUNY Dance Initiative, 92Y’s Harkness Dance Festival, Bryant Park, and Jacob’s Pillow. In 2018 they were the first dance company commissioned by Symphony Space’s beloved Selected Shorts, where they premiered an adaptation of Ben Loory’s short story, The Cape.

During the pandemic, their artistic model was transformed by the 2020 premiere of The Carpet Series, a compact outdoor performance taking place on a 5x8 Persian carpet in public spaces throughout NYC. Showcasing the talents of five contemporary ballet dancers and an array of solo musicians, it is a choreography rich in detail, complexity and virtuosity. It has been performed 100+ times in 4 boroughs, including a month-long residency at the NY Botanical Garden.

The Carpet Series has been featured in the New York Daily News and DANCE Magazine, where critic Nancy Wozny observed, “the geometric patterns of the Persian rug echo and amplify Lamb’s idiosyncratic movement vocabulary, which is both intensely intricate and unusually syncopated.”

Pigeonwing’s upcoming projects include a new work based on CRISPR gene-editing technology, commissioned by the MIT Museum.

Robert Sirota

Over five decades, composer Robert Sirota has developed a distinctive voice, clearly discernible in all of his work – whether symphonic, choral, stage, or chamber music. Writing in the Portland Press Herald, Allan Kozinn asserts: “Sirota’s musical language is personal and undogmatic, in the sense that instead of aligning himself with any of the competing contemporary styles, he follows his own internal musical compass.”

Robert Sirota’s works have been performed by orchestras across the US and Europe; ensembles such as Alarm Will Sound, Sequitur, yMusic, Chameleon Arts, and Dinosaur Annex; the Chiara, American, Ethel, Elmyr, Blair and Telegraph String Quartets; the Peabody, Concord, and Webster Trios; and at festivals including Tanglewood, Aspen, Yellow Barn, and Cooperstown; Bowdoin Gamper and Bowdoin International Music Festival; and Mizzou International Composers Festival. Recent commissions include Jeffrey Kahane and the Sarasota Music Festival, Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, Palladium Musicum, American Guild of Organists, the American String Quartet, Alarm Will Sound, the Naumburg Foundation, and yMusic, Thomas Pellaton, Carol Wincenc, Linda Chesis, Trinity Episcopal Church (Indianapolis), and Sierra Chamber Society, as well as arrangements for Paul Simon.

Grants include the Guggenheim and Watson Foundations, NEA, Meet the Composer, and the American Music Center. Sirota’s works are recorded on Legacy Recordings, National Sawdust Tracks, and the Capstone, Albany, New Voice, Gasparo and Crystal labels. His music is published by Muzzy Ridge Music, Schott, Music Associates of New York, MorningStar, Theodore Presser, and To the Fore.

Rising

Dances about water - rivers and oceans - are among the oldest human forms of expression. In this time of climate change and rising sea levels, the Neave Trio and Pigeonwing Dance come together to perform Rising, an evening-length work with a rich score by composer Robert Sirota, and intricately detailed choreography by Gabrielle Lamb. Weaving together music, text, and dance, Rising is a meditation not only on rising temperatures and sea levels, but also on humanity's rising awareness of our connection to and dependence on the Earth's oceans.

The project's impetus came from the Boston-based Neave Trio (violin, cello, and piano), whose mission "to Engage, to Exchange, to Connect" prompted them to respond through music and movement to the 2021 UN Report on Climate Change. They chose composer Robert Sirota for his emotional musical language, complete with dramatic and lush harmonic landscapes, and choreographer Gabrielle Lamb for her understated lyricism, deeply felt sense of motion, and musical instincts.

Rising, for 5 dancers, incorporates music and choreography with the spoken words of scientists, marine biologists, and oceanographers around the ideas of oceanic phenomena - Upwelling, Spiraling, Descending, Surging, Hovering, Rising - and water's interaction with marine life and climate.

The evening opens with "Floating." A single dancer is onstage, moving to spoken text by an oceanographer describing oceanic gyres. Words give way to the piano's rippling arpeggios, and more dancers enter with sinuous oscillations suggestive of sea creatures. Soon, their five bodies combine into fluent living sculptures. Eye contact connects dancers, transforming abstract movement into human interaction and hinting at multiple interrelated stories.

The Neave Trio is integral to the work, onstage and off. Musicians share the space with the dancers, and as the piece moves from "Hovering" through "Surging" the music changes course without losing momentum.

There are other intelligent creatures out there — whales, dolphins, elephants, fish. Some of them are really smart. But they don't know what we know. They can't see the inside of a star or the inside of a starfish...We have this power not only to explore, but we can go back in time. We can anticipate the future, far into the future. We can plot a course for ourselves based on intelligence. And the trick is: OK, homo sapiens, the smart ones, the wise ones — let's take advantage of that capacity.

—Dr. Sylvia Earle, marine biologist
